

-----Original Message-----

From: Peter Tiedt [mailto:rigel@stars.co.za]

Sent: Monday, July 17, 2006 11:34 PM

To: eiportne@mweb.co.za

Subject: Border Cave Pics

See attached photos

Border Cave is on the slopes of the Lebombo Mountains. Has been inhabited by man for thousands of years.

No digging / excavating at the moment, but many artefacts recovered and some on display in a small interpretative centre near the road.

No charge for the interpretative centre, R10 pp for the walk to the cave, plus tip as the curator is very helpful.

From there the curator will take you on a short walk to the cave itself, not much to see as everything is protected by sandbags. There are two approaches, one from the south and one from the north to the cave, which is very large (about the size of Battle Cave in the Drakensberg). Cave is about 25 or 30 vertical m below the ridge and about a 10 minute walk from the interpretative centre.

PT